About the lecturer:

Liliana Civjane (Lilian Tzivian) holds a Ph.D. in Epidemiology from the Department of Epidemiology and Health Evaluation Services, Faculty of Health Sciences, Ben Gurion University of Negev, Israel. She completed her post-doctoral studies at the Heinrich Heine University of Dusseldorf, Germany, where she started to work in environmental epidemiology. In 2022 she continued education on digital solutions in epidemiology at the University at Buffalo, NY, USA, with the support of the Latvian Ministry of Education and Science.

Liliana currently holds a full professorship at the Faculty of Medicine and Life Sciences, University of Latvia (UL). At UL she led the creation of a new accredited Master's study program “Epidemiology and Medical Statistics”, and she is the head of this program. She serves as a lead researcher in the Institute of Clinical and Preventive Medicine at the UL and leads international projects related to cancer medicine and health promotion. In addition, she continues scientific work in Environmental Epidemiology at the Institute of Occupational, Social and Environmental Medicine, Centre for Health and Society, at the Heinrich Heine University of Dusseldorf, working on environmental exposures and cognitive health. In 2023 Lilian was elected as the European Chapter Councilor of the International Society of Environmental Epidemiology.

Lilian is an author of more than 40 scientific publications in scientific journals with high impact factor and three book chapters.
